Liberty Introduces Intelix HDMI over IP Extenders

INT-IPEX1000 series extends HDMI over LAN with PoE support.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado—March 4, 2015—Liberty AV Solutions announced the first Intelix HDMI over IP extender series, INT-IPEX1000. These products are designed to distribute an HDMI formatted video signal from a single source to multiple displays, such as a digital signage environment.

The INT-IPEX1001 is an HDMI video to M-JPEG encoder which transmits the video via UDP through the LAN output. The INT-IPEX1002 receives the UDP stream on the LAN input and decodes the M-JPEG video back to an HDMI formatted video stream. Since UDP is a unidirectional protocol, the INT-IPEX1001 has a built-in EDID of 1080p/30 with 2 channel audio.

These products are preconfigured to work out of the box: connect the INT-IPEX1001 to the source device, connect the INT-IPEX1002 to the display, connect the extenders to up to 100 meters of Cat 5e or greater cable, and then apply power to all devices. When connecting multiple displays, a dedicated gigabit switch, such as the Intelix INT-IPSW1100 series, is necessary. If the switch supports Power over Ethernet (PoE), the included power supplies are not necessary. Up to 3 switches may be in-line, which can extend the source signal up to 400 meters (1312 feet), with a maximum resolution of 1080p/60.

The INT-IPEX1000 series extenders are expected to be available Q2 2015 from authorized Liberty AV Solutions/Intelix dealers across North America.
